

Why Club Integrity?

Club Integrity's philosophy is the kids come first. This may seem like an obvious goal for a club volleyball program, but it is not a philosophy shared by all clubs. Some volleyball clubs, (and their coaches) conduct themselves as if the kids are lucky to be playing for one of their teams. Some volleyball clubs become interested in players only after they've reached a certain level of proficiency or a certain height!

Club Integrity is focused on player development from an early age. Our players acquire a full appreciation for volleyball and a love for the game. This is accomplished through hard work, dedication to the kids and having FUN!

Our coaches consider themselves role models for the kids and we try to conduct ourselves as such. We teach our players not just about volleyball, but also about life. We believe that sports is a way to prepare our children for the adversities and the challenges that life will present to them as they get older and gain more responsibilities. Some day your daughters may encounter the difficulties all adults have to face from time to time. How they deal with life's challenges will depend largely on how you, the parents, raised them.

Another source of strength when dealing with life's challenges will come from the lessons they learned playing sports. Those lessons include; having confidence in themselves, setting goals for themselves & then working hard to achieve those goals, accepting input/coaching from those who care about them and want to help them improve, competing against others who want to win as badly as they, never giving up, learning from their mistakes and moving on, helping teammates by supporting them and encouraging them to perform better and accepting victory & defeat with grace. These are the "life lessons" volleyball and all sports teach young people and these are virtues we promote and try to embody.
