Joshua 1:9

Caden's life verse guided him daily and was a constant reminder that he was never facing anything alone.

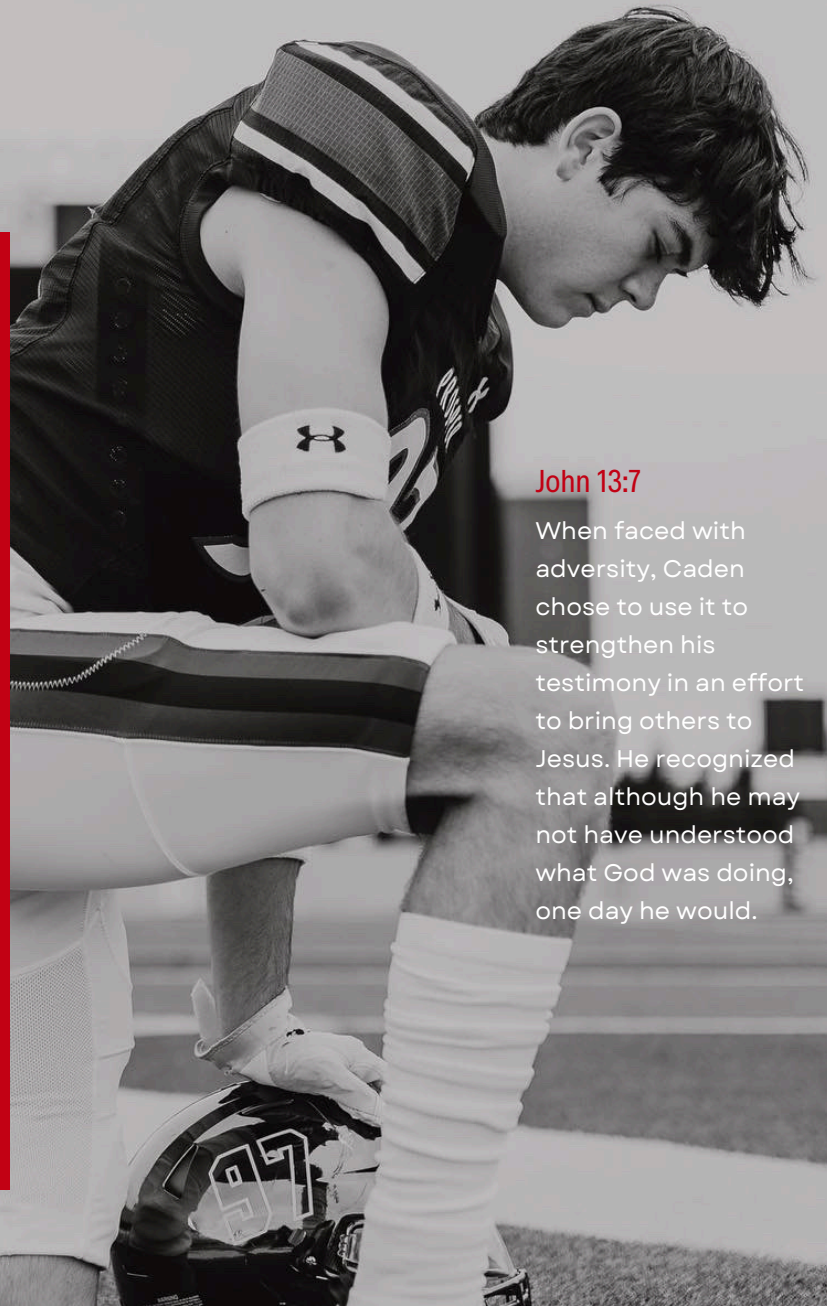

Caden believed that the little things mattered...in sports and in life. In sports, focusing on footwork and hand placement can be the difference in making the tackle or missing it. The same is true in life. A smile, a listening ear, or a helping hand can often be the difference in someone else's day.

He also never let setbacks in life or athletics hold him back. Whether it was another necessary surgery or disappointing placement on the depth chart, he used it to fuel his desire to outwork everyone and be the best at whatever role he played on the team.

Relationships were the guiding factor in Caden's life. First and foremost, his relationship with Christ drove his decision making and his treatment of others. The bonds he shared with family, friends, and teammates were of the utmost importance to him, and he could always be counted on in any situation.

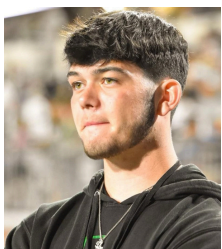

It is our hope that this sports season opens your eyes to the little things that matter, brings you opportunities to be challenged in new ways, and is the beginning of new and impactful relationships.

John 13:7

When faced with adversity, Caden chose to use it to strengthen his testimony in an effort to bring others to Jesus. He recognized that although he may not have understood what God was doing, one day he would.
