Inside scoop

At this time last year, Cretin-Derham Hall was cruising into Xcel Energy Center squarely in the state title conversation.

Fast forward to now, and the hype surrounding the Raiders couldn't be more different. The team struggled down the stretch before clawing its way through the Section 3AA tournament and enters the Class 2A field unseeded.

It might be the perfect situation.

The Raiders (18-9-1) still have the high-powered offense, are getting huge contributions from underclassmen and have some ever-important tournament experience. Cretin-Derham Hall is flying under the radar, and, with notoriously shortened benches in a television time-out tournament, this could be the most dangerous team no one is talking about.

Team snapshot

FORWARDS: Cretin-Derham Hall's run-and-gun attack is led by Mr. Hockey finalist Jake Fisher, a Northern Michigan commit who boasts an eye-popping 33 goals and 60 points. Attila Lippai, who will play his college hockey at nearby St. Thomas, is second on the team with 41 points. The secondary scoring comes mainly from freshman Max Anderson (14 goals) and junior Chuck Owens (10 goals).

DEFENSEMEN: Seniors Simon Houge and Colton Jamieson — another St. Thomas recruit — are modern, mobile defensemen who drive play from the point and join rushes whenever they get the chance. They have 31 and 26 points, respectively.

GOALIES: It was a goaltending-by-committee approach for the Raiders to start this season after losing star netminder Marko Belak to graduation. Junior Leo Miller eventually grabbed the starting job and was rock-solid in the Section 3AA tournament, stopping 72 of 75 shots.
